PREFACE

*In the name of Allāh, the Beneficent, the Merciful
O Allāh, send Your blessings upon Muhammad & His Progeny*

This booklet contains some Prophecies about the Occultation of Imām al-Mahdi (a.s.). It shows that this belief was prevalent among the Shi‘as and even some Sunnis right from the time of the Leader of the Faithful, ‘Ali (a.s.). Poems based on this belief were composed and recited in the presence of Imām aṣ-Ṣādiq (a.s.). It also points to some historical developments that re-confirm the existence and impact of those prophecies. Three great non-Shi‘a traditionists wrote books on Imām al-Mahdi’s ghaybah long before his birth in 255 A.H.

They undeniably prove the truth of the Occultation and Re-appearance of the Ṣāhibu ’l-‘Aṣr — the Master of this Time. May Allāh hasten his reappearance.

PROPHECIES ABOUT OCCULTATION OF IMĀM AL-MAHDI (A.S.)

The belief in an ideal future (in which justice and equity would reign in place of the present injustice and oppression, and which would be ushered in through divine power) is not just an Islamic dogma; it is a natural instinct ingrained in human soul and mind by the Creator. That is why this belief is shared by all religions; it is a common heritage of all who believe in a Creator. The Hindus are awaiting their 10th Avatar to begin the Satya Yugya (era of truth); the Zoroastrians hope for the rule of Ahura Mazda; the Jews are still waiting for the Messiah, and the Christians look forward to his second coming. Not only the followers of religion, even the pagan Greeks longed for an Utopia, and the confirmed atheists, i.e. the communists, piously teach that a time would come when complete equality and equity would reign on the earth, and the society would be cleansed of oppression and tyranny (even that of the state!)

The universal acceptance of this idea and ideal shows that it is a divinely-inspired goal which the humanity is irresistibly proceeding to. What the Islam and the Prophet (s.a.w.a.) did was to give us the good news that that era was near at hand, that the awaited divine rule was to be established not in some unknown generation, but specifically by his 12th successor. In the year 256 A.H. that successor was born. The hope culminated into fulfilment, the future became present, the unseen materialised into the seen, and the universal aspiration of a golden age was personified in al-Mahdi, turning the prophecies into a fact.

The belief in al-Mahdi was not a wishful thinking of Shī‘as. Long before the birth of al-Mahdi, Imām Ahmed ibn Hanbal (died 240 A.H./855 CE) and Imām al-Bukhari (died 256 A.H./870 CE) had recorded the prophecies of Holy Prophet (s.a.w.a.) about the advent of Al-Mahdi. Before them, their Shaykh, Hafiz Nu‘aym ibn Hammad who was a contemporary of Imām ‘Ali Rida (a.s.) and died in 228 A.H. in the life of al-Mahdi’s great-grand father, Imām Muhammad Taqi (a.s.), wrote Kitabu ‘l-Fitan<sup>1</sup>, in the fifth chapter of which he has recorded in full detail the traditions which he had received about al-Mahdi (a.s.). His asnad is very high; he narrates only through three or four intermediaries from ‘Ali (a.s.) and other companions of the Holy Prophet (s.a.w.a.) about al-Mahdi (a.s.). Even after al-Mahdi’s birth, when it was a common knowledge that the Shī‘a, after the death of their 11th Imām were believing in his son as the promised al-Mahdi (and who had gone into hiding), the Sunni scholars of tradition went on recording those prophecies of the Prophet (s.a.w.a.) with utmost care in their books, and especially in the books collectively known as “the six correct books.” There are at least 400 traditions from the prophet narrated in the Sunni books; and Shaykh Lutfullah as-Safi has collected in his book, Muntakhabu ‘l-athar Fi ‘l-Imami ‘th-Thani‘ashar 600 traditions from Sunni and Shī‘a sources.

A gist of those prophetic traditions is found in the following writing of the famous Sunni Sufi, Shaykh Muhyiddin ibn al-Arabi al-Undulusi. He writes in al-Futuḥatu ‘l-Makkiyah:-

“Know that al-Mahdi (Allāh be pleased with him) must certainly appear. But he will not appear until the world becomes full of tyranny and injustice, then he will fill it with justice and equity; and if there is no more than one day remaining from (the appointed age of) the world, Allāh will elongate that day to enable this Caliph to rule. And he (i.e. al-Mahdi) is from the progeny of the Messenger of Allāh (Blessings and peace from Allāh be upon him), from the children of Fatimah (Allāh be pleased with her!); his fore-father is al-Husayn son of ‘Ali ibn Abi Talib; his father is al-Hasan al-Askari, (who is) son of Imām ‘Ali an-Naqi, son of Imām Muhammad al-Taqi, son of Imām ‘Ali ar-Rida, son of Imām Musa al-Kazim, son of Imām Ja’far as-Sadiq, son of Imām Muhammad al-Baqir, son of Imām Zaynul Abidin, son of Imām Husayn, son of Imām ‘Ali ibn Abi Talib. His name is the name of the Messenger of Allāh (i.e. Muhammad). The Muslims will do his bay‘ah (i.e. will declare their allegiance to him) between ar-Rukn (al-Yamani) and Maqamu (Ibrahim); He will be like the Messenger of Allāh (Blessings and peace from Allāh be upon him!) in appearance, and below him in character because nobody can be like the Messenger of Allāh (Blessings and peace from Allāh be upon him!) in character, as Allāh says: “Verily thou art on great character.” ..... He will distribute the wealth equally and will do justice to (his) subjects ..... Many more people will abstain from sin because of his fear rather than because of the Qur’ān. (Because of his blessings) a man who would be ignorant, coward and miser in the evening will become learned, brave and generous in the morning. Help (of God) will walk in his front ..... He will follow the footsteps of the messenger of Allāh, and he will commit no mistake; there will be an angel supporting him without his seeing him, he will raise up the weary, and help the weak. His action will be according to his words, and his words according to his deeds ..... He will destroy injustice as well as unjust, and will raise the religion and put the life back into Islam. Allāh, through him, will strengthen the Islam after its dishonour, and make it alive after its death. He will revoke jizyah, and will call towards Islam with sword. .... He will manifest the religion as it is in reality, so that if the Messenger of Allāh (Blessings and peace from Allāh be upon him!) were alive, he would confirm it. Thus in his time there will not remain but the (original) religion pure from the (people's) views ..... Jesus, son of Mary (p.u.h.), will come down to him, near the white minaret in the eastern part of Damascus, leaning upon two angels – one on his right side and the other on his left – when the people will be in the prayer of ‘aṣr (afternoon). ..... (Jesus p.u.h.) will break the cross and kill the swine. And al-Mahdi will die clean and pure. .... And (Al-Mahdi) appeared in the 4th period (i.e. after tabi‘in)... Then he went into seclusion, till comes the known (i.e. appointed) time.”<sup>2</sup>

The belief was commonly known to the Shi‘as also right from the early days of Islam. I do not propose to quote here from our traditions; but the poets’ works were the common heritage of all the Arabs, and their Qaṣīdahs reached within astonishingly short time from one corner of the Arab empire to the other. Therefore the following few line from a famous Qaṣīdah of Di‘bil gain much weight as evidence, especially because they were recited in the presence of Imām ar-Rida (a.s.), the great-great-grand father of al-Mahdi. After describing the injustice done to Ahlu ‘l-Bayt he says:-

*“Had it not been for that which I hope (to happen) today
or tomorrow,
My sorrows would have torn my heart into pieces!
(That thing is) the emergence of an Imām who must surely emerge,
Who will surely rise in the name of Allāh, with blessings;
He will separate every truth and falsehood in us,
And will requite for blessings and misfortunes, Therefore O my soul! Be happy, then again O my Soul! Be cheerful,*

Because that which is to come is not very far.”<sup>3</sup>

It is clear from the above that the belief in al-Mahdi was not a “rationalization after the fact”; it is based on well-known and widely accepted prophecies of the prophet (s.a.w.s.) and the Imams – a prophecy which the later events proved true.

Another irrefutable proof, that this prophecy was generally known to the Muslims right from the beginning, are those “imitation” Mahdis who appeared from time to time, beginning from the first century of Hijrah. Some Shi‘as thought that Muhammad al-Hanafiyah, the 3rd son of ‘Ali (a.s.), was the promised al-Mahdi; Muhammad (the purifical soul) son of ‘Abdullah ibn al-Hasan al-Muthanna was given the same title; al-Mansur (the 2nd Abbaside Caliph) named his son Muhammad and gave him the title, al-Mahdi (158-168/775-785) hoping to impress upon the people that his son was the Mahdi of the prophetic traditions. All these attempts to fit the prophecies on themselves, show that

3 Di‘bil (148-246 A.H./765-860) was a staunch Shi‘a and one of the brightest stars of Arabic poetry. The Qaṣīdah from which these lines have been taken is in praise of the Ahlu ‘l-Bayt and about injustice done to them. When the 8th Imām ‘Ali ar-Rida (a.s.) was made heir-designate of al-Ma’mun in 201 A.H./817, Di‘bil went to Marv (now Mary in Turkmenistan), and recited the Qaṣīdah before him. Its literary sublimity made people send its copies to far away places, and even before Di‘bil left Marv, the Qaṣīdah had become famous throughout Arabia. It contained 120 abyat (i.e. 240 lines), and has been extensively quoted and copied by writers, historians and the scholars of literature. The abyat given in the text are found in the following books, among others (incidentally all these books are by Sunni authors):-

a. Abu ‘l-Faraj Isfahani, al-Aghani, vol. 18 p. 29, 58

b. Ibn ‘Asakir, Tarikh Dimashq, vol. 5, p. 234

(Both write that even al-Ma’mun later asked Di‘bil to recite the Qaṣīdah before him, and uncontrollably wept on hearing it)

c. Yaqt al-Hammu‘i, Mu‘jam-ul-Udaba’, vol. 4, p. 196

More and detailed references to the poet and the poetry may be seen in al-Ghadir vol. 2, p.p. 349 - 3rd ed. 1387/1967; Darul-Kitab al-‘Arabi, Beirut.

there must be a genuine al-Mahdi in the same way as the “parkar” pens point to the existence of a genuine “Parker” a “lifeboy” soap proves the existence of an original “Lifebouy”; and an imitation ruby loudly says that there must be a genuine ruby.

Nor is this belief a product of the putative-pessimism of the Shī‘ite community, supposedly resulting from the unending oppressions, persecutions and tragedies which the community was subjected to in the early centuries. This belief is not a product of pessimism; rather it is the fountain-head of optimism. Our traditions emphasize that the best deed, after the prayer, is to wait for the “release from adversity” (i.e. re-appearance of Imām al-Mahdi). We are therefore, constantly hoping for the joy and happiness, personified in Imām al-Mahdi, the Imām who is alive at this very time, and who himself is awaiting the command of Allāh to reappear, so that he may strengthen the weak, and judge the oppressors. He will reappear “without having done Bay‘ah to any oppressor”. He went into occultation because he did not want submit to any unjust ruler. His existence, his whole life, is a personification of this “rejection of injustice”. Those who believe in him, know that they too have to remain steadfast in face of oppression and tyranny; they too have to remain unbending before injustice and inequity. This feeling which may be experienced but not described, creates a spiritual relationship between the Imām and his followers, a psychological rapport between the leader and the masses.

It creates hope in place of despair; it replaces weakness, defeatism and grief with strength, confidence and joy. It gives one the courage to stand up before the tyrants instead of bowing one’s head before them in submission.

As one orientalist wrote, a community which eagerly looks forward to a great future, and whose members are advised to always keep their swords ready and within reach – in order that they could rush to their Imām, at whatever time the call came – can never despair of the calamities, nor can it ever lose hope.

The Islamic revolution of Iran, that has established the rule of Shari'ah for the first time after the truce of Imām Hasan (a.s.) 14 centuries earlier, has been established by this very community which ardently believes in Imām al-Mahdi (a.s.). Do you think it was the work of pessimists?

Strange as it may seem, it is the actual materialization of prophecy that has prompted majority of the Muslims to deny the presence of al-Mahdi at this time. You see, nobody disputes with the Hindus, the Jews or the Christians regarding their awaited 10th avatar or Messiah. It is because they are not a present fact, they are presently just an idea, which can do no harm to the evil doers. But al-Mahdi is not an idea; He is a fact, a reality, a living authority, always in readiness to come out to judge between the oppressor and the oppressed, and this aspect disturbs many people who are not yet ready to surrender themselves to the rule of Allāh. They like the proverbial ostrich, try to save themselves by closing their eyes to the fact and denying the reality.

It is now clear that the belief in Imām al-Mahdi (a.s.) and his establishing the rule of God on earth is based on solid foundation of the Prophet's traditions narrated from the very early days of Islam by the Sunni and Shí'a muhaddithun: and that it was not a wishful thinking of the Shí'a scholars who allegedly took refuge in that belief because the expected reappearance of the 12th Imām did not materialize soon.

Now, it is proposed to show that the ghaybah (occultation) of the Imām al-Mahdi (a.s.) was not an unexpected phenomenon; it was foretold by ‘Ali (a.s.) and other Imams of Ahlu ’l-Bayt, books were written and poem composed especially on this subject long before the birth of Imām al-Mahdi (a.s.).

Let us begin with the Qaṣīdah of the famous poet of Ahlu ’l-Bayt, as-Sayyid ibn Muhammad al-Himyari, which was composed one hundred and fifty years before the ghaybah, in the day of Imām Ja‘far as-Sadiq (a.s.)

First a few words about as-Sayyid:

Abu Hashim Isma‘il ibn Muhammad al-Himyari (popularly known as as-Sayyid) was born in 105 A.H., at Oman, of Ibaḍi parents, but became Shī‘a in his childhood and remained steadfast in his belief, in spite of the pressure and tyranny of his parents which compelled him to leave his home in Basrah.

He went to Kufa where he took ahadith from al-A‘mash and others. He was a contemporary of 10 Khalifas (5 Umayyads, and 5 Abbasids); and died at Baghdad in the reign of Harun ar-Rashid in 173 A.H. (or 178 or 179).

He is one of the three “Greatest Poets” in Islam. It has been mentioned earlier that poetry was the nearest thing to the Arabs’ hearts and a good poem or Qaṣīdah spread like wildfire throughout Arab empire in an amazingly short time. Also it was easier to remember and narrate. as-Sayyid’s name and fame had spread throughout the Muslim world; and the brilliant aura surrounding him was un-paralleled in history. Many people had made it their duty to memorize and recite his poems. Such people were called Rawiyah, and every great poet had a Rawiyah of his own, but as-Sayyid had twelve Rawiyas.<sup>4</sup>

as-Sayyid in the beginning followed the Kaysaniyyah belief that Muhammad ibn al-Hanafiyyah was the fourth Imām and that he had gone into ghaybah (occultation) and would re-appear near Qiyamah. Some of his poems on this theme are preserved in the books. Then he met Imām Ja‘far as-Sadiq (a.s.); and after seeing clear proofs from the Imām (a.s.), he came on right path and left Kaysaniyyah belief.

On accepting the true belief, he said two famous long Qaṣīdah on this subject. The first one begins with these lines:

“When I saw people going astray in religion,
I followed (Imām) Ja‘far (as-Sadiq) together with those who follow him.
And I called the name of Allāh, and Allāh is Great —
And I firmly believe that Allāh pardons and forgives.”<sup>5</sup>

Then composed another one, addressing the Imām (a.s.) in which he explained why he was misled into Kaysaniyyah belief: He says.

O Trustee of Allāh and Son of His Trustee! I repent to the Beneficent God, and thereafter return To you, from that affair which I staunchly believed, and for which I used to fight (i.e. argue) with every one.

And when I believed about the Son of Khawlah (i.e.

Muhammad al-Hanafiyyah) that he was hidden, it was not because (God Forbid) I had any enmity towards the progeny of the purified one (i.e. towards Imām Zaynul ‘Abedin (a.s.))

But it has been transmitted to us from the Wasii (Successor) of Muhammad (i.e. from ‘Ali a.s.) — and he was not untruthful in what he said — That the Waliyul-amr (the Master of the affair) shall be lost — will not be seen — (remaining) in hiding, as does one who is wary and waiting;

And the property of the lost one will be divided (among his relatives) as though he were buried in a raised surface (i.e. in the grave);

Thus he will remain (like that) for a time, then he will rise up all of a sudden as the star, Capricorn, comes up from the horizon;

He will proceed with Allāh’s help from the House of his Lord, with divine sovereignty and well-arranged authority;

He will advance with his standard towards his enemies and will put them to sword exterminating them, as does a strong-willed enraged person.

So, when we were told that the Son of Khawlah (Muhammad al-Hanafiyyah) had gone in occultation, we applied our word (i.e. the above tradition) to him, and did not refute it;

And we said that he is the Mahdi and the Qa'im, by whose justice every famished person will live (in comfort).

But if you say, 'No', then the truth is what you say; and what you have ordered is the certainty — without any prejudice.

And I call my Lord as witness that your word is the Proof (i.e. the authority) over all the creation, be they obedient or disobedient.

That the Master of the affair, and the Qa'im (towards whom my soul aspires jubilantly)
Shall have a ghaybah, it is necessary (for him) to disappear in that seclusion — May Allāh then have His blessings on him, the hidden one.

He will then remain (waiting like that); thereafter he will appear at his time and fill the east and the west with justice.

This is (now what I believe) in the secret and in the open, O Trustee of Allāh! and I do not care even if I am blamed for it.”<sup>6</sup>

Ash-Shaykh al-Mufid comments on these lines: “Look at this declaration of as-Sayyid which clearly mentions the ghaybah. How could he say it [in such a definite manner]; had he not heard it from his Imāms (a.s.) — and his Imams heard it from the Prophet, May Allāh's blessings be on him and his progeny. Otherwise, how was it possible for a speaker to tell something and then for that thing to happen in exactly the same manner as he had said. Without a single letter going wrong?”<sup>7</sup>

In this background, and keeping in view the frequent burnings of the Shí‘a libraries right from the fourth century of hijrah (when the books of the matchless library of Shaykh at-Tusi were burned several times) to the present time (when the Israeli forces occupying South Lebanon burned to ashes the library of late as-Sayyid Mohsin al-Amin al-‘Amili, which contained thousands of rare manuscripts not found anywhere else), the above-mentioned lines of as-Sayyid, even if not supported by any other argument, would have been enough to prove that the ghaybah of Imām al-Mahdi was a phenomenon foretold by the Prophet and the Imams (Blessings and peace be on him and them), especially as they were addressed to Imām Ja‘far as-Sadiq (a.s.) saying that it was the Imam (a.s.) who had said these things to as-Sayyid al-Himyari.

But we also have ahadith of the Imams to this effect, one of which is quoted here from as-Shaykh al-Mufid’s small Fifth Risalah on Ghaybah. He writes:

“First of them is the hadith narrated by the Sunnis and the Shí‘as both; and it is reported by Kumayl ibn Ziyad. He says: “I came to the Leader of the Faithful (‘Ali a.s.), and he was scratching on the ground. I said to him: “O my Master! Why are you scratching on the ground? Is it because of any longing for it?” He said: “By God! I have never desired it even for a moment. But I was thinking about the ninth from the progeny of Husayn (a.s.). He it is who will fill the earth with equity and justice, as it would have been filled of injustice and oppression. There will be for him a ghaybah (occultation) during which the liars will entertain doubts (about his existence). O Kumayl, son of Ziyad, it is essential for the earth to have a Hujjah ( = proof, i.e. Prophet or Imām) — either manifest with well-known personality, or hidden (and) unknown — so that the proofs of God may not be discontinued.”

Al-Mufid says that “The hadīth is long; we have quoted here only the portion that is relevant to our topic.”<sup>8</sup>

It should be noted that, according to Shaykh al-Mufid, this hadīth was narrated by Sunni narrators too in those early days. He could not make such a claim lightly when he knew that enemies of his faith would pounce on him if he wrote a single word without proof, or made any baseless claim.

The traditions that the al-Qa'im al-Mahdi will remain concealed from the public for a very long time — a phenomenon which would make a lot of people go astray — were circulating in the Shī'a world since the days of 'Ali (a.s.).

Apart from the clear, detailed and unambiguous declaration of as-Sayyid al-Himiyari, there are some other historical developments that re-confirm the existence and impact of those traditions.

When Imām Musa al-Kazim (a.s.) died in 183/799, after spending a long time in the prison of Harun ar-Rashid, a huge amount of his money had accumulated with many of his agents in various towns. Among them Ziyad Qandi had seventy thousand dinars with him, and 'Ali ibn Abi Hamzah al-Bata'ini had thirty thousand. They and many others like them had spent the whole money dishonestly in their personal investments and domestic use. When Imām 'Ali ar-Rida (a.s.) wrote to those agents directing them to bring the money to him, many felt trapped. And the easiest way out for them seemed to deny the death of Imām Musa al-Kazim (a.s.). They said that Imām al-Kazim (a.s.) was the al-Qa'im al-Mahdi, who had gone into seclusion, according to the ahadith of the previous Imams saying that al-Mahdi would remain hidden; they claimed that it was Imām al-Kazim (a.s.) who was al-Mahdi and was now in ghaybah. This was the origin of the Waqifah sect.<sup>9</sup> What we are concerned with here, is the fact that some leaders of the Waqifah group wrote books on ghaybah; in which they enumerated the traditions narrated from the Imams about the ghaybah, of course, they wrongly tried to apply those sayings to Imām Musa al-Kazim (a.s.). One of them was al-Hasan ibn Muhammad ibn Suma'ah al-Kufi. He had written thirty books, one of them being Kitab al-Ghaybah. He had died in 263 A.H., only three years after the death of our 11th Imām Hasan al-‘Askari (a.s.). His Kitab al-Ghaybah was available in the Shí‘a circles; as-Shaykh at-Tusi (who had ijazah to narrate it) had a copy in his library, as may be seen in his al-Fihrist (The Catalogue)<sup>10</sup>

These traditions were so well-known that many non-Shí‘a writers also collected them in book form. I have mentioned one book earlier; three other books are given here:-

1. ‘Ubbad in Ya’qub al-Rawajini was a Sunni Muhaddith, who died in 250 A.H. i.e. in the life of the 10th Imām, ‘Ali an-Naqi (a.s.). He wrote a book, Kitab Akhbar al-Mahdi (Book of traditions on al-Mahdi a.s.).<sup>11</sup>
2. Muhammad ibn al-Hasan ibn Jamhur al-‘Ammi al-Basri was a companion of the 8th Imām ‘Ali ar-Rida (a.s.) who had narrated some traditions from him. He was a Ghali.<sup>12</sup> He wrote many books. Two of his books are named: (a) Kitab Sahib-iz-Zaman a.s.; and (b) Kitab Waqt Khuruj al-Qa'im a.s. (i.e. the Book on the Time of the Appearance of al-Qa'im a.s.).<sup>13</sup>

3. The Shí'as repeatedly asked the Imams (a.s.) about leaders of the Waqifah and other such sects, what they should do with their books. The reply was always the same:

(Take their narratives, and leave aside their views). It was for this reason that our 'ulama' used to take the ahadith narrated by non-Ithna-ashari Shí'as too (provided they fulfilled other necessary conditions). And I am glad that they did so, and not only for the sake of historical records.

4. By narrating Kitab ul-Ghaybah of al-Hasan ibn Muhammad ibn Suma'ah and those books of others and including them in his al-Fihrist, as-Shaykh at-Tusi has shut the mouths of those who think that the belief in the Ghaybah of al-Mahdi al-Qa'im was a conspiracy of the Shí'a scholars hatched when the expected reappearance of the 12th Imām (a.s.) did not materialize. These non-Shí'a books are enough to prove that the belief that al-Qa'im al-Mahdi (a.s.) would remain in ghaybah (occultation) was the common heritage of all Muslims — Sunnis and other Shí'a sects; and that books were written on this topic long before the birth of the 12th Imām (a.s.).
